

What teachers do matters

The major message is simple—what teachers do matters. However, this has become a cliché that masks the fact that the greatest source of variance in our system relates to teachers—they can vary in major ways. The codicil is that what "some" teachers do matters—especially those who teach in a most deliberate and visible manner. When these professionals see learning occurring or not occurring, they intervene in calculated and meaningful ways to alter the direction of learning to attry various shared, specific, and challenging goals. In particular, they provide students with multiple opportunities and alternatives

Visible teaching and visible learning

We think in generalities, but we live in details.

syntheses in this book is "visible teaching and learning". Visible teaching and learning chapters provide the evidence to defend this overall message. learners (self-monitoring, self-evaluation, self-assessment, self-teaching). Thus, it is visible own teaching, and when students become their own teachers. When students become that the biggest effects on student learning occur when teachers become learners of their teaching as the key to their ongoing learning. The remarkable feature of the evidence is of learning. It is teachers seeing learning through the eyes of students, and students seeing passionate, and engaging people (teacher, student, peers, and so on) participating in the act mastery of the goal, when there is feedback given and sought, and when there are active, teacher and the student both (in their various ways) seek to ascertain whether and to what occurs when learning is the explicit goal, when it is appropriately challenging, when the art in any synthesis is the overall message, and the simple adage underlying most of the the evidence to defend it. It is as much theory generation as it is theory appraisal. The 50,000 studies and 800+ meta-analyses that form the basis of the discussion. Instead chapters. The aim of this book is not to overwhelm with detail from the more than teaching and learning by teachers and students that makes the difference. The following their own teachers they exhibit the self-regulatory attributes that seem most desirable for degree the challenging goal is attained, when there is deliberate practice aimed at attaining then to convince the reader of the nature and value of the story by working through the aim is to build an explanatory story about the influences on student learning and This chapter introduces the major findings that will be elaborated in the following
